

Floods, drought, mining, corrupt cops, deaths in custody, the list of finalists in this year's Queensland Media Awards contains a lot of old favourites, yet the work produced by Sunshine State journalists remains as fresh and powerful as ever.

The Media Entertainment & Arts Alliance received more than 320 entries this year and the winners will be announced at a gala dinner on September 13.

The judges said the standard of entries this year was "as strong as we've come to expect. Queensland continues to be the source of some of this country's most outstanding journalism.

"The range of subjects and the skill and flair of some of these finalists is extremely impressive."

Tickets for the Queensland Media Awards at Sebel & Citigate King George Square, 6.30pm, on Saturday September 13, are still available. For full details visit www.queenslandmediaawards.com.au

The awards follow the Alliance Future of Journalism conference at QUT Gardens Theatre, featuring an impressive array of some of Queensland's top journalists and media commentators. For further information see www.thefutureofjournalism.org.au Tickets for both are being offered as part of a special deal.
